“The Carter Center helps others help themselves, offering them the tools and knowledge they need to improve their own lives. When people believe in themselves, hope is born.”

A Message From President Jimmy Carter

Emily Staub

On the 25th anniversary of The Carter Center, Rosemary and I are filled with gratitude for the many partners who have believed in our vision of a world where everyone can live in peace and enjoy good health.
A few love and generosity have renewed hope for people in more than 65 nations and saved millions of lives.

We thank you from the bottom of our hearts.

A Look Back: Center Advances Peace with Justice

The Carter Centers peace programs have helped individuals gain freedom and secure democracy across the globe. The belief that human rights, rule of law, and free elections are vital for preventing conflict. The formal diploma for the International or National Human Rights Award, and the International Human Rights Award, are presented to their respective states.

Jimmy Carter and Carter Center staff show that overcoming authoritarianism will fill the need for a viable peace in Ethiopia, Liberia, and the great lakes region of Africa. The area is a vital part of the world.

It's more difficult to free elections to resolve international problems. The Carter Center pioneered the field of election observation more than a decade ago. It's more difficult to help voters they feel safe and secure, and to help people vote their votes.

Every election, the Center nurtures the growth of democratic institutions to help ensure respect for rule of law, open and transparent government, and fair access to resources. To compete for public office, our staff also work to strengthen the human rights system and the International Criminal Court so that the law may preserve the universal human rights upheld by the integrity and worth of individuals.

The following timely provisions are a reflection of the Center's years of peace.

Money is tight for Yayu Zonveni (far right) and her husband, Rimmond (right), but they are thankful for the home they share with their seven adult children. A typical house in Kinshasa is a cement cube with a dirt floor, no doors or windows, and most residents eat only once a day or every other day.

In a country with very little infrastructure, most streets in Kinshasa are littered with garbage and difficult to pass. Most residents do not have any electricity or water, and many neighborhoods have open sewers.

Project Connects Media Ownership and Election Campaigns

This map of Peru was rendered by the Mapping the Media Web site, <http://www.mediamap.info>.

Many voters still think their over-the-air media policies with repayment of campaign costs is merely a reward rather than to serve the public good.

The over-the-air media ownership dilemma is how to ensure sufficient funding and access to the media, while also attempting to foster competitive elections yet prevent undue influence by special interests. While this issue poses difficulty even to developed democracies such as the United States and Canada, it is particularly acute in countries where over-the-air development places limits on the over-the-air media's ability to finance elections from the national budget.

The Carter Center in partnership with the University of California at Berkeley has initiated a project to measure the influence of election media in the Western Hemisphere, by identifying media ownership and their electoral interests in countries where the case is a particularly important one to create maps showing the political advertising sources reaching voters in a given electoral district.

There is no doubt that mass media outlets, the majority of which are heavily regulated for profit, businesses are profiteering off elections. Many of these are for advertising and delivery of a vote to wealthy candidates or individuals preferred by the government. While in other countries, such as the United States, the results are more mixed, the overall result is that the media are a tool for the interests of the wealthy.

Emily Staub
The Carter Center

The Mapping the Media project aims to show connections between the media and elections in Latin American countries such as Mexico (left) and Guatemala (right).

This project puts information in the public hands to encourage debate about the role of media and democracy in elections. It empowers motivated citizens to have a greater role in the political process.

The maps use geographic information systems, a state-of-the-art technology to digitally map layers of political data on television, radio, newspaper ownership, structure, their broadcast relationships, viewership, readership, news sources and political affiliations over a territorial map of each country. The maps juxtapose the media information against social and demographic information as well as electoral information. This helps citizens see the relationships between media distribution and electoral participation and voter outcomes.

The Center also has incorporated assessment of impact. In its election observation missions, it verifies that countries have complied with their obligations to implement the steps to improve their electoral practices. The maps are available at <http://www.mappingthe.media.org>

Defenders Speak Out to Protect Human Rights

Courageous activists for the rights of others often face reprisals in countries where, as human rights are still in jeopardy, many are ordinary people—lawyers, politicians or staff of government organizations.

Human rights activists are more threatened than at any time in recent history. In many countries, the war on terrorism is used as a reason to empower police and intelligence agencies, and the Carter Center's human rights program these unsung heroes gather annually at the human rights conference in Jerusalem. In 2001, the Carter Center's human rights first to strengthen their voices and rally international support for their causes. Meetings are held by the Carter Center and the High Commissioner for Human Rights.

Participants in the May forum discuss how to help defenders who are often fragile emotional support human rights, representatives of human rights organizations, and other human rights activists. The conference is a place where the defenders realize that despite the tensions in some areas that raise the hopes of millions of people for freedom and justice—other human rights organizations—established—are falling short in their support of fundamental human rights.

You really could not have democracy without human rights. Human rights elections, democracy and development are all interrelated. In fact, I would prioritize human rights ahead of the elections themselves. Saudi human rights defender Clementine Al-Otaibi said:

She is reporting the international community to stay silent after elections to ensure human rights are embedded in the institutions that are likely to be established. Democracy or countries must emerge from conflict.

Every time I come here to the forum, I go home more energized and more hopeful that I must fight. Also, that I must also be said. For example, Ibrahim, a human rights activist and professor at Al-Azhar University in Cairo

I have been arrested several times. I have been sentenced to his rights or sentenced to a seven-year term, but eventually as a citizen and release.

In addition, Ibrahim, there are many people like myself who have sacrificed and who continue to sacrifice for the sake of human rights and democracy.

Democracy Program

Further its effort to strengthen democracy throughout the democratic world in the democratic territories of the democratic republic of the Congo this past year

The Carter Center observer team witnessed the military coup against a majority of the seats in the democratic parliament in January. The Carter Center observers were able to enter the country and meet with the leaders of the opposition to help them hold a peaceful and competitive election. Despite the observer's conclusion that the election process was severely flawed, some members of the international community moved to withhold vital aid and funds from the struggling democratic authority.

In August, the program employed a small election observation team for the upcoming presidential and parliamentary elections. The observers were able to see the efforts to implement constitutional and electoral reforms to give all parties a role in self-governance and to sustain dialogue with civil society to keep the democratic process moving forward.

In the democratic republic of the Congo—a country that has been torn by civil war for over a decade—the Carter Center observers were able to witness the country's first presidential and legislative multiparty elections in 40 years. The observers praise the orderly and peaceful process which has more than a dozen candidates for parliament.

In the past several years, Carter Center program staff continue efforts to promote democratic solutions to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, working with leaders from Israel and the Palestinian as well as representatives of the Egyptian government.

In Liberia, where the Center has worked for months to ensure a peaceful transition of power, the Center continues efforts for the post-conflict government to promote the rule of law, incorporate traditional practices into the legal processes, and expand the reach of the legal system to rural areas.

In the conflict-ridden Democratic Republic of Congo, the Center's assistance includes support for the prosecutor of the International Criminal Court, and practical ways to make investments more complementary to peace processes in a country where the democratic republic of the Congo.

Americas Program

The Americas program furthered efforts to strengthen democracy and increase transparency in the hemisphere. A three-year access to information project in Jamaica ended after helping to organize a open process to work with the government and civil society to apply it. Similar projects also took place in Liberia, where help was given to draft a new constitution. In Liberia, a new process is being raised among civil society groups of their rights to information about the fight against poverty and inequality. Its signature contribution was the pioneering of a model of international development cooperation emphasizing grassroots participation over a top-down development plan. A greater coordination of development policies and practices of donors has been applied effectively in four countries.

Lymphatic Filariasis Elimination Program

Lymphatic filariasis is a parasitic disease which is transmitted by mosquitoes. It causes limb swellings, sometimes to a degree proportionate to the severity of the infection. In some cases, it causes elephantiasis. Not only do people suffer from fevers and fatigue, but they often have difficulty moving freely, but they often become social outcasts because of their appearance.

In a collaborative effort, the Carter Center is working with the Ministry of Health of Sierra Leone to show that the transmission of lymphatic filariasis can be interrupted. In Sierra Leone, a national health education campaign is being implemented with the Ministry of Health. The Center is also working with the Sierra Leone malaria program to help deliver insecticide-treated bed nets to protect individuals from the bites of mosquitoes. In Sierra Leone, almost 10 million people are treated with bed nets every year. In Sierra Leone, almost 10 million people are treated with bed nets every year.

The Carter Center, Inc. Financial Statements

August 31, 2006 and 2005

With independent audits of the

Independent Auditors' Report

The Board of Trustees
The Carter Center, Inc.:

We have audited the accompanying statements of financial position of The Carter Center, Inc. (CCI) as of August 31, 2006 and 2005, and the related statements of activities, functional expenses and cash flows for the years then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of CCI's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion. Our audits do not, however, constitute a test, as we are not required to audit all items. In addition, we also include in our audit procedures the use of analytical procedures, which may provide additional evidence about the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly in all material respects the financial position of The Carter Center, Inc. as of August 31, 2006 and 2005, and the changes in its net assets and cash flows for the years then ended in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

1. Organization and Operation

future periods or restricted by the donor for specific purposes are reported as temporarily restricted or permanently restricted support that increases those net asset classes.

Contributed property and equipment is reported at fair value at the date of contribution. If donors stipulate how the assets must be used, the contributions are reported as restricted support. In the absence of such stipulations, contributions of property and equipment are reported as unrestricted support.

Inventory

Inventory consists of materials which are used to treat other diseases. River lily essences and thymol are used for treatment. Inventory is recorded as a contribution at its value using the first-in, first-out method at fair value at the time of the gift.

Investments

Investments in the pooled endowment fund and pooled cash made in the future are stated at fair value as determined by the custodian. The university uses the following guidelines for the fair value of publicly traded securities. The primary security is based upon quoted market prices and exchange rates if applicable. Fair values for private market investments, real estate and oil and gas properties held through limited partnerships or committments are determined by the alterative investments, often referred to as hedge funds, typically in the form of limited partnerships, are not as readily ascertainable. Fair value for these investments is established based on either external events which substantiate a higher fair value or a reasonable methodology that exists to capture a liquidity premium. In some instances, those higher fair values may require the use of estimates. If or if such values may differ from the values that would have been used had a ready market for these investments existed.

Investments in private partnership interests are valued using the most current information provided by the general partner. General partners typically value privately held companies at cost or a discounted value based on a relevant market transaction. Public companies are valued using quoted market prices and exchange rates if applicable. Real estate partnerships and funds are valued based on appraisals of properties held or quoted by third-party appraisers retained by the general partner or investment manager. General partners of master limited partnerships provide values based on quoted market prices and exchange rates for publicly held securities and valuation estimates of derivative instruments. General partners of oil and gas partnerships also use third-party appraisers to value properties. The values of the investments in the pooled endowment fund and pooled cash made in the future are valued by the university as determined by the market value. It has concluded that such values are reasonable estimates of fair value at the time of the gift.

All other investments are stated at fair value based on quoted market

Contributions for the support of CCI activities are reported for the development of the activities in the quarterly statements for the reporting period, and through the quarterly statements to support CCI's operation of the activities in the monthly statements of the Company.

Donated Goods and Services

Donated materials and equipment primarily medical supplies are reflected as contributions at their estimated fair values. Donated services are reflected as contributions if the following criteria are met: the services received or to be received create or enhance identifiable intangible assets or the services require specialized skills are provided by individuals possessing those skills and would be purchased if not provided by donation. Donated services are recorded as the services are performed.

Fair Value of Financial Instruments

The carrying amount of cash and cash equivalents, accounts receivable, accounts payable, and liabilities and deferred revenue approximates fair value because of the relative terms and short maturity of these financial instruments. The carrying value of investments in the pooled common stock fund and short-term investments in the pooled cash management fund is fair value as determined by diversity. The carrying value of all other investments is fair value based on quoted market prices. The carrying value of contributions received as a liability is based on the present value of the estimated future cash flows.

Tax Status

CCI has received a determination letter from the Internal Revenue Service stating that it is recognized as a 501(c)(3) organization. Here, you relate the effectiveness of the Company's status to federal income tax provisions for income taxes has been made in the financial statements.

11. Related-Party Transactions

Mormon University provides certain administrative functions to CCI including but not limited to payroll administration, investment management information technology and other services. CCI paid Mormon University $1,000,000 for the years ended June 30, 2006 and 2005, respectively for the provision of these services.

Mormon University made unrestricted contributions to CCI of $1,000,000, respectively for the years ended June 30, 2006 and 2005. In addition, other related parties of the statement of financial position as of June 30, 2006 are $1,000,000 due from Mormon University related to income tax returns for fiscal year 2006. In addition, CCI made unrestricted contributions to CCI primarily related to income tax returns at CCI of $1,000,000 for the years ended June 30, 2006 and 2005.

CCI is currently affiliated with two separately incorporated entities, Carter Center and Carter Center Foundation. Payments made by CCI in support of its affiliates are included in expense programs presented in the accompanying statements of activities. Expense provided by these affiliates as a percentage for fiscal years 2006 and 2005, respectively are included in program ratios in the accompanying statements of activities. Net revenues from these affiliates were $1,000,000 and $1,000,000 as of June 30, 2006 and 2005, respectively and are included in other accounts receivable in the accompanying statements of financial position.

12. Commitments and Contingencies

Generally funded programs are routinely subject to special audits that could result in claims against the resources of CCI. Management does not believe that there will be any claims arising from such audits that could have a material adverse effect on the financial position of CCI.

13. Subsequent Events

Subsequent to the reporting period, CCI entered into a agreement for a revolving line of credit with a financial institution. The line of credit bears interest at 1% plus a margin. The agreement provides for a maximum amount of $1,000,000. The agreement is secured by all deposits and investments maintained with the lender and is guaranteed by Mormon University.

Our Mission

The Carter Center, in partnership with Emory University, is guided by a fundamental commitment to human rights and the alleviation of human suffering; it seeks to prevent and resolve conflicts, enhance freedom and democracy, and improve health.

While the program agenda may change, The Carter Center is guided by five principles:

- The Center emphasizes action and results. Based on careful research and analysis, it is prepared to take timely action on important and pressing issues.
- The Center does not duplicate the effective efforts of others.
- The Center addresses difficult problems and recognizes the possibility of failure as an acceptable risk.
- The Center is nonpartisan and acts as a neutral in dispute resolution activities.
- The Center believes that people can improve their lives when provided with the necessary skills, knowledge, and access to resources.

The Carter Center collaborates with other organizations, public or private, in carrying out its mission.
